Speakers

UNIGE professors, lecturers and researchers; professionals in the practice of philanthropy from Switzerland and abroad.

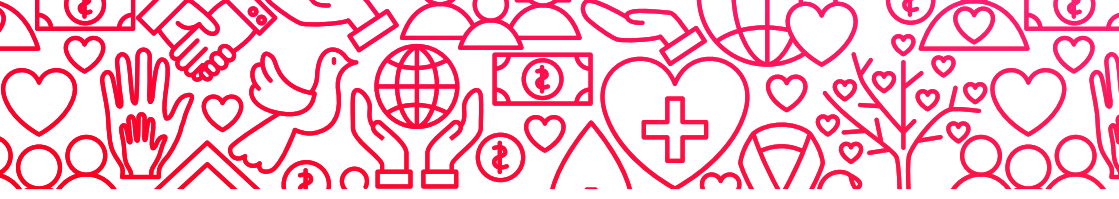

Switzerland is home to a robust philanthropic sector, with over 13,500 foundations collectively holding significant assets, estimated at around 100 billion Swiss francs (three times as much as Germany), which spend about 1 to 2 billion a year on philanthropic projects. Despite these figures, the ratio of assets to donations remains relatively low compared to other countries: in Switzerland the ratio between assets under management and donations is under 2%, while for instance in England it is 16%.

New philanthropists risk reinventing the wheel with each one of their actions or wasting a lot of time looking for information (legal, marketing, etc.) to create and develop their activity, while existing philanthropists and philanthropic organisations are increasingly required to adapt to market needs and evolving practices to support more social justice and more common good.

This professional training programme is a pioneering continuing education offering, including the first Master of Advanced Studies (MAS) in Philanthropy to be launched in Europe. With an interdisciplinary approach it is composed of three specialised Certificates of Advanced Studies (CAS): two well-established CAS in Strategic Philanthropy and Operational Philanthropy, respectively, and the new CAS in Frontiers in Philanthropy. Two combined CAS (with a final report) give eligible participants a Diploma of Advanced Studies (DAS); three CAS together with a supervised research project or a practical Master's thesis, will give eligible participants the opportunity to earn a Master of Advanced Studies in Philanthropy (MAS). In this flagship programme, participants will have the opportunity to get in-depth, hands-on experience, working closely with the Geneva, Swiss, and international philanthropic sectors - a unique opportunity that opens doors to a future philanthropic engagement.

Eligible participants who have already completed formal university training in philanthropy can ask for qualifying ECTS credits to be validated for the obtention of the Master of Advanced Studies (MAS) degree in Philanthropy, on a case-by-case basis.

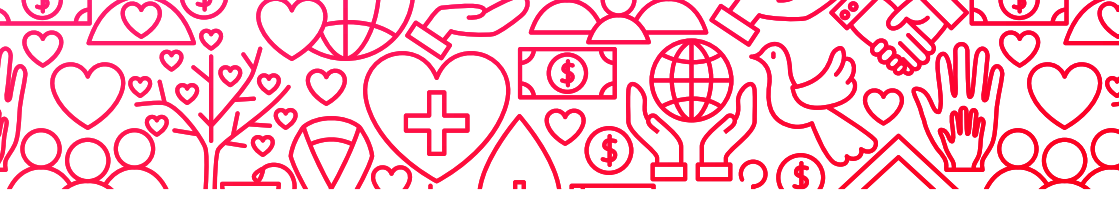

Each CAS defines a theoretical framework to conceptualise philanthropy and offers numerous tools to help practitioners understand the nuances of the philanthropic sector, learn how to develop successful strategies and to put them into place. Participants will thus be able to efficiently measure philanthropic impact in a systemic perspective, while being aware of the dynamics of this sector and its evolutions. With the acquisition of this knowledge, the goal of these programmes is to form professionals who are empowered to maximise the effectiveness of philanthropic endeavours, particularly in addressing complex societal challenges and driving policy through collaboration, innovation, and inclusiveness.

Learning Outcomes

At the end of this course the participants will be able to:

- Understand and master conceptual philanthropy frameworks, including novel financial instruments aligned with the U.N. SDG agenda 2030 and ESG metrics.
- Develop an effective theory of change using state-of-the-art tools to implement, monitor, and evaluate the financial and social impact of a philanthropic endeavor.
- Design philanthropic strategies aligned with organisational missions, legal and tax parameters, general goals, and specific objectives.
- Master cutting-edge approaches to philanthropy, including emerging digital technologies.
- Become inclusive leaders who harness the potential of staff and volunteers, develop partnerships with public and private actors, and understand both the funder and grantee sides of philanthropy.
- Put into practice an effective approach to collaborative and inclusive philanthropy.
- Plan advocacy and influence within the overall strategy of a philanthropic organisation.
- Master novel financial instruments and assess their relevance to daily practice.
- Navigate the extensive philanthropic ecosystem in and around International Geneva.

DAS Final Report

The obtention of two CAS (in any order), coupled with writing a final report (4 ECTS), makes up a Diploma in Advanced Studies (DAS). Participants must succeed in all modules and in the written report to obtain the DAS.

MAS Final Project

Once the 3 CAS are completed, participants obtain the ECTS credits that make them eligible to obtain a MAS in Philanthropy. For this, participants will have to complete a final project (15 ECTS). Participants may choose the format of their final work: thesis, practical experience, or capstone project.

For participants who have already completed the DAS by July 2024, their work will count for the final project.

Evaluation Methods

The programme has a modular structure with an evaluation at the end of each module. Participants are required to earn a sufficient grade to pass each module (min. of 4/6) in order to obtain the certificate/diploma. The programme relies on a wide variety of evaluation methods to assess participants' understanding of the course content, which includes open-answer exams, essays, case studies, in-class presentations, and reports. Participants are required to complete both individual and group work.

In-person participation is mandatory.

To obtain a DAS and/or a MAS, participants have to write a final report.

Testimonials

The course undoubtedly consolidates a participant's knowledge and equips them with a versatile set of skills, and opens new perspectives and contacts. I encourage people working in other fields to apply in view of a career change or just because of an appetite for philanthropy.

Nicolas C.

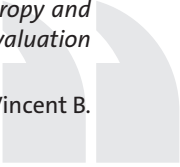

Following the Operational Philanthropy CAS in Geneva has given me access to course material and presentations from hands-on specialists providing in-depth and very tangible analysis of contemporary Philanthropy. This exhaustive curriculum coupled with the rich exchanges from the professionally diverse student body is for me the perfect match. I definitely recommend this to anyone wanting real-life Philanthropy exposure and training.

Ilham S.

The DAS programme has enabled me to leverage my banking background with my strong involvement in social organisations. How exciting to better understand opportunities, challenges and the evolution of philanthropy while developing a network of professionals who want to make a lasting impact!

Marie-Luce C.

Philanthropy is evolving and it changes the way we work for the public good: more strategic, more inclusive, more collaborative. Whilst I have more than 20 years experience in this sector, the DAS not only allows me to understand and master the fast-changing world of philanthropy and social innovation, it also strengthens my skills in management, evaluation or planning.
